

CONTINUITY ON DEMAND: LESSON 13

4.11.2018

Final Review

Do you feel the class has met your expectations?

- I do. It has actually exceeded my expectations. Before I began this journey of a career change, all I knew was what I had found online and read in a book. And much of that information was confusing. Not only has the class laid out the job and all that it entails, the chatroom creates an environment where I feel comfortable asking a question about something I've learned, but don't fully understand.

What are your thoughts on the Homework given?

- I feel like the majority of the homework throughout the entire course is very helpful in solidifying concepts. It can be difficult to understand and remember some of the details when it's not put in practice, but the assignments give hands-on opportunities to try out the TAOC system.
- In some of the later lessons, it was discouraging and frustrating to be given the same assignment that I had done just one or two lessons before. While it was easy to resubmit the same assignment, I would have appreciated a new assignment to practice the concepts.

How did you like the class being online?

- The online class was perfect for me. Not living in a film hub city, there aren't many opportunities to attend live classes on Script Supervising. I also appreciated that it flexed with my schedule and ability to study.

What do you think about the teacher?

- I think Dawn is an excellent teacher. I think that with so many years under her belt as a working Script Supervisor, she has so much to offer. I also appreciate that her class begins with the basics of the job, to include pen to paper forms.

What is your confidence level since taking the course?

- The first student film I worked on, I was very nervous and unsure if I would remember everything I had learned. However, I quickly realized that I knew not only what my job was, but also the basics of many of the jobs around me. On my first day, I sat to the side, trying not to get in the way, taking notes as best as I could. By the end of the shoot, I was educating the student
